DOG QUARANTINE TO BE PLACED

State Laboratories Find Myers Dog Had Rabies. Hundred Day Quarantine is Determined upon. Watch for Yellow Posters.

For a period of one hundred days, dogs in Gettysburg will be under strict quarantine, following the decision of the borough authorities to co-operate with the State Livestock Sanitary Board in the effort to prevent any further spread of the rabies contagion.

A telegram received this afternoon from the state laboratories at Philadelphia announced that examination of the Myers dog had proved conclusively that it had been suffering from rabies.

Burgess Holtzworth, representing the town, and Dr. Hudson, representing the State, will have direct charge of the enforcement of the quarantine and unmuzzled dogs and those on which no tax has been paid will run few chances if they appear on the streets. The appearance of the large yellow quarantine posters about the streets of town will be official announcement of the regulation going into effect.

The quarantine will provide that all unmuzzled dogs be kept off the streets for the hundred day period. Dogs on which the usual tax has not been paid and which are not wearing the dog tags will be liable to be shot even though they are muzzled.

It is known that the Myers dog, which it was found necessary to kill on Thursday evening, was playing with other dogs about town as late as Tuesday. One of these dogs is said to be the brindle bull which may be seen on the streets of town almost any hour of the day and which usually gets into several fights during a morning. Whether or not the rabies will develop in any of these dogs remains to be seen but every precaution will be taken to protect citizens.

DANIEL SWEENEY

Native of Gettysburg and for Years Emmitsburg Resident.

Daniel Augustus Sweeney, for many years a resident of Emmitsburg, died at St. Agnes' Hospital, Baltimore, on Tuesday morning aged 70 years. Mr. Sweeney was born in Gettysburg, Oct. 8, 1843, and was the son of Martin and Mary Sweeney. He was the senior member of the firm of Topper and Sweeney, funeral directors for more than twenty years.

Mr. Sweeney spent the greater part of his life in Emmitsburg residing only a few years in Baltimore. In 1868 he was married to Elizabeth Latham.

He is survived by one daughter, Stella, of Emmitsburg, two brothers, E. M. Sweeney, of St. Joseph, Mo.; P. F. Sweeney, of Chicago, Ill., and one sister, Miss Kate, also of Chicago.

The funeral services were held Friday morning at St. Joseph's Catholic Church of which he was a life-long member. Rev. Fr. Eckles officiating. Interment in cemetery adjoining the Church.

POISON CANDY

Six Made Ill Eating Candy Sent by Mail.

Six persons including four employees of the Dillsburg post office, were poisoned by candy sent from Harrisburg to Postmaster F. M. Altland. Postmaster Altland and his daughter, Catharine, are in a serious condition. The others who partook of the candy and were made ill, are Bailey Spohr and Robert Smith, R. D. carriers, and Helen Spohr and Maud Klugh, two school children, who were treated by the postmaster's daughter.

The candy, a box of home-made fudge, was received by Postmaster Altland Friday morning. He treated his daughter and the two carriers. Several other persons were offered the candy, but refused. The postmaster's wife refused to eat any, becoming suspicious when she was told that the person who sent the candy was unknown to him. Detectives have been put on the case and an investigation is being made.

WE desire to express our appreciation of the liberal response to the "Bargain Day" offer. Orders from every section of town congested delivery but the patience of our customers made it possible to take care of every order—even though some deliveries were a little late. WILL MEET HERE MAY 15 AND 16

Battle Anniversary Commission with Representatives from Various States will Meet here about Middle of May.

The Pennsylvania commission on the celebration of the semi-centennial of the battle of Gettysburg on Friday night authorized a call to the representatives of the National and State Governments in charge of preparations for the observance next July.

The conference will be held at Gettysburg on May 15 and 16, at which the final arrangements for the big gathering of veterans will be made. At that time each State will be asked to give the exact number of its veterans which will attend. The apportionment of space by States in camp to accommodate 40,000 veterans will follow immediately after the number of visitors is ascertained.

The commission named the Governor, Colonel James D. Schoonmaker, chairman; Captain George F. Baer and Captain John P. Green as a committee to arrange a tentative program for the celebration, and contracts were authorized to be let for a tent to hold over ten thousand persons.

The bills carrying $360,000 for Pennsylvania's part in the celebration were approved by the Governor Friday and steps will now be taken to provide transportation for the veterans authorized to be cared for at the camp and those entitled to transportation. These will be furnished only to the veterans and not to their families, each veteran being required to furnish satisfactory proof of identity and service in the Civil War.

BAND OF HOPE

Medal Contest Exercises in Brua Chapel by Boys and Girls.

A very pleasant entertainment was given Friday evening in Brua Chapel by the Band of Hope to a medium sized audience. It consisted of recitations, drills, songs and an oratorical contest for a medal, which is awarded annually. The declamations by the contestants were given at intervals between the other numbers. One of the best performed was the one called "Uncle Sam's Vision." "A Sensible Dog" by "Bud" Menchey was particularly attractive and a fine dog figured in the part. The judges for the oratorical contest were Mr. Brosius, Mr. Reitz, and Mr. Oney and when they announced their decision the medal was awarded to Miss Pauline Lestz with honorable mention to Miss Helen Aumen. Seldom has a child of her age given a more perfect performance than was given by little Miss Lestz. The entertainment was in charge of Mr. Shilke, of the Seminary, and Mr. Miller, of the class of '15 in College, who are carrying on the work in the Band of Hope.

RUNAWAY

Spangler Milk Wagon Figured in Runaway on Carlisle Street.

The horse of George E. Spangler ran for some distance on Carlisle street early this morning when the king bolt on the milk wagon to which it was hitched gave way. The team minus a driver ran for several squares and was caught by James McCullough. Considerable milk was spilled and a number of bottles broken but little other damage was done.

IMPROVEMENTS AT THE COLLEGE

College Campus a Busy Place these Days with New Walks and Many Other Changes in Course of Construction.

A large force of men is at work on the college campus making additions and improvements to various parts of the college property all of which are to be completed before commencement in June.

On Thursday the construction of a new concrete walk from the Old Dormitory to Glatfelter Hall was commenced. It is to be the gift of the present Senior class and will run the greater portion of the way at the side of the main drive. The gift of the class will also include two large electric light standards at the entrance to Glatfelter Hall. Several other paths were considered one of which would have run from the center of the campus to Glatfelter Hall but all were abandoned.

A new lay-out of the campus is in contemplation which will include, it is said, the placing of the present driveway in the rear of the President's residence and the various fraternity houses but nothing looking toward that end will be done until after the battle anniversary celebration, as it is the desire of the college authorities to have the grounds in the best possible condition when the President, Vice President and other distinguished guests are entertained in the various buildings.

The Junior class now has under consideration the construction of a concrete driveway or path at the entrance to the campus connecting with the concrete pavement which is now being built along Washington street at the expense of the college. With the new gateway of brownstone and bricks, which is now under construction, it is believed this would make a very attractive entrance, though the gateway made necessary the removal of one of the oldest and finest trees on the lower campus.

While these operations are in progress the students are also showing more than ordinary vigor by cleaning up tennis courts, and making improvements about the various fraternity houses, and the campus is expected to take on its best appearance before the end of May.

Commencement this year is expected to bring back even more old students than usual and it is possible that it will be found necessary to erect a large tent for the alumni collocation instead of being able to serve it in examination hall as has been the custom in the past.

TELEPHONE SINGING

Harney Christian Endeavorers Sing to Sick Member over Telephone.

On last Sunday evening and on Tuesday evening of this week the Junior Christian Endeavor of St. Paul's Lutheran church at Harney met at the home of E. L. Hess and sang a number of selections over the telephone for S. S. Shoemaker, who is sick at his home below Westminster. Mr. Shoemaker was president of the society from the time of its organization until he moved away last Spring. He always seemed to be deeply interested in their musical training, and now in his condition enjoys having them come to the telephone and sing for him.

PASS HUNTERS LICENSE BILL

Adams County Hunters Take Keen Interest in Bill which has Been Approved by Governor and is now in Effect.

The Davis hunters' license bill, followed by more Adams County people than any other bill in the state legislature, on Friday became law in Pennsylvania by Governor Tener's approval of it, and hereafter no one may hunt except upon land owned or leased by him unless he takes out a license costing a dollar and displays upon his sleeve a tag bearing the number of his license.

Under the provisions of the bill it applies to all citizens of the State and their sons. Residents of other States are not required to take out licenses and foreigners not naturalized are not allowed to bear firearms.

The license costs a dollar and may be taken out before any county treasurer or a justice of the peace upon written application. No person under 14 may be licensed and, no one under 16 without consent of parent or guardian, in writing. In addition to the license there is to be issued a tag bearing the license number in figures at least one inch in height, to be worn upon the arm between elbow and shoulder so as to be seen while the holder of the license is hunting.

Violation of the act is made punishable by a fine of $20, but the act is not to apply to any person having a gun in his home and using it in self-defense or for shooting at a target or any bona fide owner or lessee of lands or member of family of such person from hunting on his own lands.

Possession of any gun or hunting device is to be considered as prima facie evidence of hunting, and persons hunting must display license to any officer protecting game or owner or lessee of land upon which any hunter may be found. The penalty of $20 is to apply to any person refusing to show a license and in possession of a gun or dead body of game.

The index of licenses is to be kept open to the public by county treasurers and the Game Commission. The county treasurer is to retain 10 cents for services in connection with each license and remit balance to the State Treasurer monthly and to constitute a fund for protection and propagation of game.

Any officer whose duty it is to protect game or preserve the peace has the right to arrest without warrant violators of the act, and to seize all paraphernalia, and upon conviction all confiscated property goes to the State, subject to the orders of the Game Commissioners, the game to be forwarded to the most convenient hospital. Under certain conditions the paraphernalia may be sold by the State.

Resistance to arrest for violation of the act or interference is to be punishable by a fine of $100. Persons failing to pay fines are to serve one day in jail for each dollar of penalty imposed, unless bail is given. More severe penalty is made for second offenses.

Fifty per cent of the revenue from the act shall be applied by the Legislature to payment of bounties for destruction of noxious animals at the rate of $1 for each mink, $2 for each weasel or fox and $4 for each wildcat. Magistrates are given right of summary conviction and informations may be made a year from time of offense.

FOUND OLD COIN

York County Man Digs up Coin Buried before the Battle.

While digging in the garden at his home in North Codorus township, York county, several days ago, Samuel Nace uncovered a cent of 1862, at the same spot where his grandfather, Samuel Nace, had buried his money and other valuables during the Civil War. When preparations were made for the battle of Gettysburg Nace, as many others, hid his money by burying it in the garden. It is believed that the old coin found was one left by his grandfather.

BRYAN AND CLARK MAKE UP

Secretary of State and Speaker End Enmity.

PEACE CAME AT LUNCHEON

The Two Clashed Hands, Broke Bread Together and Then Issued Statements.

Washington, April 19.—Champ Clark and William J. Bryan have made up each other's shoulders and made up after elaborate negotiations, covering several days, the two were brought together at a luncheon for the first time since the falling out at the Baltimore convention which resulted in the overthrow of the Clark boom and the nomination of Woodrow Wilson. The two clashed hands, broke bread together and issued statements.

The Bryan statement is plainly apologetic. The secretary of state says in effect:
"You were all right, Champ; it was the company you were keeping that I objected to."

The speaker in his statement concedes nothing, except that Mr. Bryan has done him no wrong. He can do to repair the injury inflicted at the Baltimore convention.

Here is the Bryan statement:
"My meeting with Mr. Clark has served to clear up a misunderstanding as to my exact position toward him at the Baltimore convention. I have tried to make it clear to Mr. Clark that I have always regarded and do now regard him as a good, clean, progressive Democrat. If my language at Baltimore created any impression that I was charging Mr. Clark with being in sympathy with any of the reactionary forces I am glad of the opportunity to correct any such misconception of my words or acts, for I did not intend to reflect upon either the personal or political integrity of the speaker. It is my earnest wish that there may be cordial co-operation between the state department and the speaker in carrying out the policies of the administration."

Here is Clark's statement:

"It is beyond the power of Colonel Bryan or any one else to correct the injustice that was done me at Baltimore. The loss of the presidential nomination was a small thing as compared to the injury done to my reputation in the eyes of the world, but now that Colonel Bryan in his public statement has done what he can to remove the injurious impression that was created by his Baltimore speeches I feel that we can all better co-operate for the good of the administration. I can only repeat what I have publicly declared time and time again, that all personal or selfish considerations must give way to the duty that all democrats owe to our party and to our country."

Bryan's statement had been submitted to Clark and Clark's to Bryan, and each had been O. K'd by the other before the formal meeting and the handshake took place. The reconciliation of the commoner and the speaker took place at a luncheon given by Ira E. Bennett, editor of the Washington Post, in a private dining room at the New Willard hotel. The passing of the peace pipe was the result of efforts by Mr. Bennett and Theodore A. Bell.

The harsh feelings between Clark and Bryan have been one of the danger spots in the Democratic situation. The speaker came out of the Baltimore convention vowing he would never again have anything to do with Colonel Bryan. Clark on every occasion showed his bitter feeling toward his opponent.

FATALLY BURNED AT BONFIRE

Little Girl's Clothing Took Fire and Companions Ran Away.

Pittston, Pa., April 19.—While playing about a bonfire in the rear of her home, Eugenie Kulas, the four-year-old daughter of Anthony Kulas, was so badly burned that her death resulted a few hours later.

The little girl and several playmates tried to see which could walk closest to the fire. As she took her turn a flame shot out and her clothing became ignited.
Her clothes burned from her body and as she became a flaming torch her little friends ran away. Her head, face and body were terribly burned and death soon relieved her suffering.

HUERTA REGIME READY TO FALL

Another Crisis Near in Mexican Situation.

Washington, April 19.—Another crisis in the Mexican situation is now seriously apprehended by the federal authorities closest in touch with the events in that country.

Advice received in Washington during the last few days indicate that fears for the ability of the Huerta government to maintain itself are well founded, and the greatest pessimism prevails in regard to the situation. The revolutionary movement led by the rebel General Carranza is regarded in Washington as the most threatening of the numerous forces arrayed against the provisional government.

The Madero family has cast its lot with Carranza and will exert all its influence in Mexico and elsewhere in aid of the Carranza revolution. The northern part of Mexico is admittedly in control of Carranza and the state forces of Sonora, Huerta does not control all the southern territory and has no troops to send against rebels in either north or south.

Foreigners are said to be closing out business connections in Mexico in even greater numbers than during the Madero and Orozco revolutions. Mills, factories and mines are being closed down and thousands are out of work in all parts of the country.

TOKIO MOB CALLS FOR WAR

But More Responsible Classes Show Spirit Friendly to United States.

Tokio, April 19.—A huge mass meeting was called to protest against the anti-Asian land owning legislation in California.

War songs were sung and demands for retaliatory measures were made by speakers. The crowd was composed for the most part of irresponsible persons.

Letters in the newspapers, unsigned, outline plans for the seizure of the Philippines and Hawaii.

Government circles, however, are showing a friendly spirit to Americans. Hamilton Wright Mabie, of New York; Dr. Peabody and John L. Mott, secretary of the international committee of the Young Men's Christian Association, were the guests of Baron Nozaki Makino, the foreign minister, at a luncheon which he gave. A very cordial feeling prevailed.

$4500 Damage Verdict.

Reading, Pa., April 19.—William B. Charlton, a traveling man of New York, was given a $4500 verdict against Frank P. Lanier, a millionaire brewer and owner of the Tri-State Base Ball park here, for injuries sustained by the collapse of a grand stand on July 4, 1911. Charlton's arm was broken and still is carried in a case. Earlier in the week the jury refused a claim to a patron, but fully a score of other suits remain to be tried.

PHILADELPHIA WANTS SUBWAYS

Would Tunnel Broad Street at Cost of Millions.

EXPLAIN TO LEGISLATORS

Would Take Three Years to Construct Tube and Estimate First Year's Net Revenue at $1,700,000.

Philadelphia, April 19.—A subway under Broad street, extending from O. ney avenue to Oregon avenue, fifteen miles, with an extension to League Island, the whole to cost an outside total of $42,725,000, is provided for in the transportation plans worked out under the direction of A. Merritt Taylor, Philadelphia's transit commissioner.

Of this amount Philadelphia would pay $34,725,000 and the lessee of the line would have to pay $8,000,000 for equipment.

The scope of the plans was outlined in a letter from Mr. Taylor to the mayor, which was read by Director of Public Works Cooke at the public hearing in the mayor's office, which was held at the request of a subcommittee of the house ways and means committee of the state legislature.

It was estimated, in this letter, which was in the nature of a preliminary report, that the subway could be built in three years. The first year of operation of the entire Broad street tube would yield, according to Mr. Taylor's figures, $1,700,000 net income. Savings effected by the expenditure of only part of the total outlay at a time Mr. Taylor estimates, would cut down the actual expenditure to approximately $41,200,000.

The transit plans include the construction of "L" lines to Darby and Frankford.

The entire plan depends upon the passage by the legislature of the enabling bills prepared by John G. Johnson, particularly of the measure that would make the personal property tax, which is now an asset of the state, an asset of the county. This would give the city a cash revenue of approximately $640,000 annually, and would increase its borrowing capacity by more than $45,000,000.

The letter was sent to the mayor by Mr. Taylor for the information of the legislative committee, which had asked for a public hearing so that it might be fully informed as to "where the money was coming from to meet the proposed increased indebtedness of the city before they should report on the measure."

Further light was thrown on the city's plans by Director Cooke, after he had read the transit commissioner's letter. In response to questions, he said he did not believe the increased indebtedness proposed would make it necessary to increase the tax rate.

He hoped, he said, that the ordinances providing for the building of the subway would be ready to be acted upon by councils before the summer recess. Three or four months more would be required to complete the engineering plans for the work. The actual construction should be begun, he said, by the first of next year.

Before beginning work, he said, the city undoubtedly would insist that a responsible company sign a lease for the road when completed. He hoped that an arrangement could be made whereby the leasing company would pay the sinking fund charges and interest during the period of construction.

SAYS FATHER SOLD HER

She Hides Herself in Home of Friend and Appeals to Police.

Wilmington, Del., April 19.—About a week ago Teresa Sasso, aged fifteen years, was married in this city to Antonio Cotillo, a young Italian.

Immediately after the wedding the girl disappeared and was not found until Thursday, having taken refuge at the house of a friend, an American woman.

The young bride said her father had sold her in marriage, taking a sum of money from the husband in her presence, and that he compelled her to undergo the ceremony, under threats of killing her if she refused.

The case was laid before Attorney General Wolcott, who directed that the girl be committed to an institution, pending his application to the court for an annulment of the marriage.

Chief of Police Black, after investigation, said he had ascertained that the sum paid for the girl by Cotillo to her father was $130.

Certain that Mr. Wayman was near a nervous breakdown, the appendicitis scare was used as a subterfuge to induce the patient to go to Excelsior Springs, Mo., to prepare for the operation.

GRAFT TRAFFIC IN BABIES IN CHICAGO

City is a Clearing House
For Foundlings.

Chicago, April 19.—"Doctors' graft," a system of fee-splitting, based on the barter in babies, was disclosed before the state legislative committee investigating charity institutions and maternity homes.

It was testified that in many cases the physician recommending a maternity home to prospective patients received as much as one-third of the money paid to the institution. The committee also was given evidence tending to show Chicago as a clearing house for foundlings throughout the middle west.

Dr. F. W. Briney, head of a sanitarium and superintendent of a Sunday school, startled the legislators with an assertion that the demand for "orphan babies" was three times as great as the supply. "We can't furnish all the babies we are asked for," he said. "We have a yearly contract for advertising in two Chicago papers in which we offer babies for adoption, but the real purpose of these 'ad' investments is to solicit the patronage of expectant mothers."

The committee learned that Dr. Briney contracted with unmarried patients so that after giving birth to children they were hired out as "wet" nurses. Their own children, however, were reared on artificial food. "We make contracts with the girl mothers before their babies are born," said the witness. Dr. Charles S. Wood, head of another maternity institution, submitted a contract which freed mothers from sign, by which they release all rights to their children and declare they have "abandoned them forever." Signatures to this document were pre-requisites to treatment, he said.

CHAPTER II.

After the Ball.

NO such concern seemed to hold Edward Thornton back. He was here, there and everywhere, overacting if anything the role of "the life of the party" and never missing a dance.

Suddenly the colonel's beautiful wife, flanked by the two vivacious girls, and herself looking the picture of health and radiance in a specially modish ball gown of flowered satin, sailed into the salon like the star of a stage play. It was the official, formal opening of the ball.

"Do you know what Mrs. Pinckney says?" Gertrude Ellingham asked Lieutenant Kerchival West. "She has invited a party of friends to her house to witness the firing on Sumter."

"How delightful!" responded Kerchival, in rather a forced tone of gaiety. "I hope, however, that they won't wait for breakfast until the fortress is bombarded."

"You think it will be a long wait?" Well, Lieutenant West, I'll bet you an embroidered cigar case against a box of gloves that the first gun is fired before sunrise."

"Done. You will lose the bet, Miss Gertrude, unless Major Ruffin, unable to curb his patience any longer, should steal out and touch off a mortar on his own hook. Not that I shouldn't be overjoyed to offer you the gloves, particularly if—well, in the hope that—that one of the little hands belonging inside them shall!"

They were in the shadow of the oleanders as he spasmodically seized one of the aforesaid little hands. She withdrew it almost as promptly, murmuring:

"Shall remain in my own keeping for the present until some one comes along who has a good excuse for claiming it. So you don't believe that General Beauregard is going to open fire on Sumter this morning?"

"No, of course not."

"Well, I happen to know that everything is in readiness."

"It is a heap easier to do a thing than it is to do it. For instance, I have been ready a dozen times today to say to you, Miss Gertrude, that—that I—"

"Well, sir?"

"But I didn't, you know."

"Very likely General Beauregard has more nerve than you have."

"Oh, it is easy enough to set a few batteries around Charleston harbor. But when it comes to firing the first shot at woman!"

"At a woman? Why, what are you talking about?"

"I mean at the American flag. A man must be a—must have the nerves of—"

"You northern men are so slow to—" "Yes, I know I've been slow, but I assure you, Miss Gertrude, that my heart!"

"Aren't you going north to join in the threatened invasion of our southern Confederate states?"

"Yes, that's our orders, I believe."

"You are ready to fight against my friends, against my own brother, your—"

"It is about the colonel's son, Frank. You know the trouble he has got into in New York. He has escaped arrest, and I have just received word that he is here in Charleston. I am the only one he can turn to. His father is stern and uncompromising in his humiliation. I want you to find Frank and arrange for me to meet him as soon as possible, if you can do it with safety. I shall give you a letter for him. I should like you to take it at daylight if possible. It is a sad errand, and I know of none but yourself whom I can trust with it."

Lieutenant Kerchival West bowed profoundly.

"I will get ready at once," he said. "I can change my clothes in five minutes."

How he welcomed this spur of action! The ball had ended for him at the last words of Gertrude.

He kept his word within the five minutes specified and came back booted and spurred to report to the colonel's wife. She was not where he had left her, but he heard her low, earnest voice at the other end of the shadowed veranda.

"If my husband knew," Mrs. Ellingham's voice was saying, "he would kill you. Edward Thornton, unless you treacherously took advantage and shot him down without remorse. You know I am innocent. I never gave you any hint of encouragement, and the last I remember you were crouching before me like a whipped cur. But I have kept the secret, and you must. Avoid meeting Colonel Ellingham before we leave Charleston."

"You have my apology," whispered Thornton.

"That is not what I have asked."

"Do you mean by that that you will not accept amends?"

"For my husband's sake," the woman pleaded.

"Ah, your anxiety on his account, madam, makes me feel that perhaps, after all, my offense is indeed pardonable. What an absurd blunder for to the word "gentleman" if actually seemed to be in quotation marks with an interrogation point after it.

"I am a southerner by choice. I shall join the cause," said Thornton curtly. "We can take care of our own rights."

"They will be safe in our keeping even if you should not find it to your interest to run risks in our behalf."

"You'll find me ready for any risk you like," muttered Thornton, turning on his heel.

At the same moment Colonel Ellingham who had not participated in the dancing, approached from the direction of his wife's apartment. He held in his hand a white silk handkerchief, which he immediately offered to Lieutenant West, who took it, glanced at the initials, his own—thanked his superior officer and passed out to the veranda overlooking the lawn, where many colored lanterns twinkled. Here, almost as if by preconcerted arrangement, Mrs. Ellingham joined him a moment later.

"Madam," said the young man, with embarrassed solicitude, "I beg to tell you how happy I am to see that your indisposition has vanished also to offer humble apologies for my awkwardness and helplessness when I undertook to rush to your aid. You can always depend upon me to act the part of an idiot in such an emergency. Fortunately I was able to find Miss Gertrude and my sister and send them to you in time to be of real service. Colonel Ellingham has just handed me back my handkerchief."

"Oh, thank you, lieutenant, for everything. I suppose my husband had been to my room looking for me. Somenobody in Charleston slept that night of April 11-12. At the Ellingham house, as at Pinckney's, and at many another home of luxury and pride there were festive or other gatherings which kept people up and about until long past midnight.

Then in the early hours of that fateful Friday an exchange of rocket signals between Forts Johnson and Moultrie began. Every one knew what that meant. The men, some of them with out stopping to change their evening clothes, disappeared with strange, silent, ominous alacrity. The women huddled in whispering groups or brought spectacles and from outdoor points of vantage watched intently across the dark waters to where the flagstaff of Sumter, like a warning finger, pointed solemnly to the stars in the balmy dusk of the southern spring time sky.

thing came up today that has upset us both a bit. And it is in regard to that matter that I wish to ask you to do me a favor—a great service. Will you?"

"Pray command me, Mrs. Ellingham," answered Kerchival with his heart thumping in wild, wondering excitement.

"It is about the colonel's son, Frank. You know the trouble he has got into in New York. He has escaped arrest, and I have just received word that he is here in Charleston. I am the only one he can turn to. His father is stern and uncompromising in his humiliation. I want you to find Frank and arrange for me to meet him as soon as possible, if you can do it with safety. "For my husband's sake," the woman pleaded.

"Ah, your anxiety on his account, madam, makes me feel that perhaps, after all, my offense is indeed pardonable. What an absurd blunder for a gentleman to make. If I had supposed it was Lieutenant Kerchival West who was my rival!"

"What do you mean, sir?"

"But instead it is your husband who stands between us."

"How dare you, sir!" cried the exasperated lady, now on the verge of hysterics. "Let me tell you that whatever I may wish to spare my husband he fears nothing for himself. But, no; I entreat of you do not let this horrible affair go any further."

Kerchival West, having no choice but to overhear, was of the same mind. He now stepped forward decisively, saying:

"Pardon me. I hope I am not interrupting. I believe, Mrs. Ellingham, you have an errand for me?"

"Yes," she exclaimed eagerly. "Thank you so much. I will go and write the note immediately. Pray excuse me, Mr. Thornton."

Without another word she hastened away. The two men bowed and waited in silence until she was out of sight and hearing. Then Kerchival West drew himself up and said quietly:

"Thornton, you are a d—d scoundrel. Do I make myself plain?"

"You have made it plain all along that you are looking for a quarrel. I've no objection. Still, I prefer to pick my own adversaries."

"Colonel Ellingham is my commander," said West, trembling with suppressed excitement. "He is beloved by every officer in the regiment."

"Well, what authority does that give you?"

"His honor is our honor. His wife?"

"Oh, that's it, eh? So you have a first class license to act as Mrs. Ellingham's champion. I have heard that her favorite officer!"

Kerchival approached a step nearer. "You dare to suggest?"

"If I accept your challenge," sneered the other, "I shall do so not because you are her protector or the protector of her husband's honor, but as my rival. We stand on even ground."

"Cur, you listen to me now!"—and Kerchival emphasized his words with a slash of his riding whip full in Thornton's face.

"I think you are entitled to my attention, sir," responded the other, recovering himself quickly.

"My time here is short, as you know," Kerchival said.

"Long enough for my purpose. I reckon. The bayou—up the Ashley a mile or so—is a convenient place. In an hour from now it will be light enough to sight our weapons."

"I'll be there in half an hour with a friend," cried Kerchival.

Nobody in Charleston slept that night of April 11-12. At the Ellingham house, as at Pinckney's, and at many another home of luxury and pride there were festive or other gatherings which kept people up and about until long past midnight.

Then in the early hours of that fateful Friday an exchange of rocket signals between Forts Johnson and Moultrie began. Every one knew what that meant. The men, some of them with out stopping to change their evening clothes, disappeared with strange, silent, ominous alacrity. The women huddled in whispering groups or brought spectacles and from outdoor points of vantage watched intently across the dark waters to where the flagstaff of Sumter, like a warning finger, pointed solemnly to the stars in the balmy dusk of the southern spring time sky.

The abrupt departure of Thornton and Ellingham accompanied, as it appeared, by Dr. Ellingham and one or two of the young men in uniform, had not failed to attract attention and excite comment. Mrs. Ellingham by discreet inquiry among the household servants, obtained a startling hint or two which she hastened to communicate in confidence to Gertrude, none else.

"There are tears in your eyes, Gertrude," said Mrs. Ellingham sympathetically.

"They have no right there," returned the girl, with a pitiful flash of the old spirit that contrasted with the seared look on her unwontedly pale face.

"I am afraid I know—not what has happened to Lieutenant West in those last few minutes, but—forgive a woman who has had more experience than you have, dear, and who is fond of you—what happened between you and him when you were together for the last time, maybe, in—who knows how long? Let fate part you, if it must, but not a quarrel. What is pride or coquetry at such a moment?"

"Another rocket," cried Madeline West, flitting from somewhere in the outer darkness. "Does any one know where Rob—I mean where Lieutenant Ellingham is? He excused himself for a minute and he has been gone an hour and a half. He promised to be here before!"

"So did Lieutenant West," Mrs. Ellingham joined in with undisguised anxiety.

Boom, came a loud, sullen, reverberating report from over the bay.

"Look!" screamed Gertrude Ellingham, jumping up in a frenzy of excitement. "Did you see that line of fire against the sky. That was no rocket—that was a shell. It has struck the fort!"

At the same instant there was a loud clatter of horses' hoofs outside and Bob Ellingham dashed up the front steps.

"Ruffin has fired the shot!" he cried, throwing his cap into the air. "Hark! there goes another one. They have opened fire on Sumter, sure enough!"

"Where is Mr. West? Mr. Thornton? The doctor?" demanded the three women, all in a breath.

"They are—Anderson doesn't reply—That's what I rode back ahead to tell you. It's all right. The second shot hit Thornton, and Kerchival hasn't a scratch. He'll be along with the doctor directly. Ruffin swore he would fire the first!"

"For heaven's sake, Robert, what are you talking about?" pleaded Gertrude, seizing him by the arm. "Do try and compose yourself and tell us what has happened. You say that?"

Miss Whitcomb's Association

By ESTHER VANDEVIER

Miss Bonfield, a lady of fifty-two, still handsome, her florid complexion contrasting with her white hair, was sitting in her boudoir one morning when she received a card bearing the name of Eben Farnsworth. In a corner of the card was written, "Miss Whitcomb's Association."

Miss Whitcomb, not having had any experience in matrimony herself, surprised her friends by organizing an association for the promotion of matrimony among those who had passed the heyday of youth. Her plan was to introduce the men members to the women, not in assembly, but by sending the men to call on the women. She would suggest to a certain man to call on a certain woman. All he had to do by way of introduction was to write "Miss Whitcomb's Association" on his card.

This plan gave great success to the association. Miss Whitcomb knew that elderly persons could not be got out in assembly for such a purpose, but she also knew that any lonely unmarried man would be pleased to meet any unmarried woman with a view to matrimony. By a call neither party would be observed by others or would be subject to ridicule. It must be admitted that the organizer was very shrewd.

Miss Bonfield looked at the card which was handed to her by her maid for some time, during which thoughts seemed to be coursing through her brain. Then she told her maid to tell the gentleman that she would be down presently. In this case presently meant half an hour. For Miss Bonfield changed her costume and had her hair done in a different style. When she took a last look at herself in a mirror she had reason to be well satisfied.

Mr. Farnsworth was fifty-five, a well preserved man of dignified appearance and old style in manner. He arose at Miss Bonfield's entrance, made a courtly bow and said:

"Having placed ourselves in Miss Whitcomb's hands, madam, nothing remains for us to do but abide by those arrangements that have been made for us. Therefore I take it for granted that no apology is necessary. It gives me great pleasure to make your acquaintance, madam."

"I approve," replied the lady, "of Miss Whitcomb's idea, and she has shown great delicacy in carrying it out. I have joined the association rather for the purpose of supporting the cause."

"I understand you perfectly. It is not necessary for you to join a matrimonial association for the purpose of being married yourself, but you approve of its object and have given it your patronage by becoming a member."

"In my own individual case there is a special reason for not caring to marry. I am going to confess to you that I suffered a disappointment in my youth."

"Some unworthy scamp, I suppose, trifled with?"

"Not at all. He was a young man of great promise and, I understand, has turned out remarkably well. It was I who was at fault. I was young, foolish and infatuated with the game of love. I rejoiced in torturing my lover and finally, by pretending dissatisfaction with him, drove him away."

"I dare say that many members of our association have had the same experience. I myself in my youth loved a beautiful and accomplished girl. We quarreled. It is the lady's privilege after a quarrel to wait the coming of the man with the olive branch. I was too proud to offer it."

The lady was silent for a few moments, then said: "I doubt if you can undo at this late date what has been done. Even if you should meet the girl who possessed your heart when you were young she would not be the same to you as if you and she had grown old together. You must remember that she would now be, I suppose, over fifty years of age."

"Just fifty-two, madam."

"You seem to have kept everything concerning her in your memory."

"I have. She was exactly five feet seven inches in height, tall and stately slightly taller than you, though much lighter in weight. Her hair was a lovely chestnut."

"It would now be mixed with white."

"Her name was Mary Pauline. I called her Marie. Her last name was By the by, there is a singular coincidence between you and her. I noticed it when Miss Whitcomb gave me your name and address. You are Miss Bonfield, I believe."

The lady did not reply. She was gazing at vacancy, and it seemed that she could look through her eye into her brain he could see the vision she saw.

"Am I mistaken?" asked Mr. Farnsworth.

"No; my name is Mary Pauline Bonfield."

"Marie! You Marie?"

"Yes; you have not recognized me as I have recognized you. Had not your name been brought to me on your card I should have known you the moment I saw you, looked into your eye, heard the tones of your voice."

"Marie! Marie! Am I dreaming?"

The next morning's mail brought Miss Whitcomb the resignation of two members of her association who were to marry; also a liberal donation to the funds of the association from the gentleman and heartfelt thanks for what she had been instrumental in doing for them.

International Shoot in Ohio. Ireland, Russia, Chile and Canada are the latest countries to signify their intention of sending rifle teams to the United States to participate in the international rifle shooting competition to be held at Camp Perry, O. In September, according to the national board of rifle practice. A letter just received from the National Rifle Association of France offers the American association six silver cups as prizes for the tournament.

FOR THE CHILDREN

The Council Fire.

Make as many paper slips as there will be boys playing the game. Letter one slip the Fire Maker, and all the rest either Good Wood or Pine Knots, but there should be three times as many Good Wood slips as there are Pine Knots.

The papers are all put in a hat, and each boy chooses one and then takes his seat on the edge of the room—all except the boy who has drawn the Fire Maker's slip. He stands in the center of the room ready to build his fires. He calls the boys to him, three or four at a time, and places them in groups that represent bundles of wood. Then he begins to bind his bundles of wood and the fun commences.

The Fire Maker walks slowly around the first group of boys, making motions with his hands as if he were binding fagots. As soon as his arms drop, though, the boys in this group take to their heels, those who drew Good Wood slips going to their seats, and those who drew Pine Knot slips chasing the Fire Maker. The Pine Knot boys try to touch the Fire Maker and tag him before he reaches his next bundle of wood. If he gets to this second group of boys and begins going again through the motions of fagot tying he is safe, but if before reaching them he is tagged the Pine Knot who tagged him takes his place and plays Fire Maker, while the former Fire Maker must sit down with the Good Wood boys. The game ends when all the bundles of wood have been used up, when the slips may be put back into the cap, mixed up and drawn over again.—Delinquent.

Weather Signs.

There are a great many signs which are well known to the so called weather prophets, and if you live in the country you may amuse yourself by verifying some of them. Here are a few of the old reliable for signs of rain:

Ants become very lively and seem to be in a hurry about something.

Roosters are always flapping their wings and hens seem restless.

Dogs and cats do not look as lively as usual and prefer to lie around the house, keeping near the fire.

Flies come indoors and seem to be unusually sticky and troublesome.

The cattle like to get into corners and usually stand with their tails toward the wind.

The mantles on the gas jets are not as bright as usual.

Swallows and other birds that feed on the wing fly very low.

Hurt No Living Thing.

Our food and garments are largely secured at the cost of great cruelty to beautiful and harmless animals and birds. But even if they are not beautiful or not harmless we should not cause unnecessary suffering to any living thing. Those creatures which must be destroyed should be killed quickly and with as little pain or fear as possible not only for their own sakes, but that we ourselves may grow into the goodness and greatness which feel for everything that lives.

In different parts of the world are many people who have found that they can be warmly and handsomely clothed without wearing the fur of animals. That there are plenty of ornaments so that there are no part of them need be worn neither feathers, wings nor skins. Our Furb Animals.

How Do You Laugh?

It is a well known and easily demonstrated scientific fact that different people sound different vowels when laughing from which fact a close observer has drawn the following conclusions: People who laugh in a groaning way as do frank honest and fond of noise and excitement, though they are often of a versatile and flexible disposition. Laughter in E pronunciation as is peculiar to phlegmatic and melancholy persons. Those who laugh in a pronounced as ee are cheerful and simple minded obliging affectionate kind and undecided people. Laughter in o indicates generosity and daring. Avoiding possible those who laugh in u as they are wholly devoid of principle.

For Girls on Rainy Days.

To make your rainy day bright do the following:

Gather all your paper dolls together. Bring out your fairy tale book and choose your favorite story.

After this has been done write a short play on that story and have your dolls as the characters.

It is lots of fun to draw their costumes and rehearse the paper dolls for the play.

In making the costumes you can color them prettily with your colors. If you prefer you may use colored writing paper which will answer nicely for the purpose.

Try this some rainy afternoon and see if you don't like it.

Game of Animals.

This is another version of "blind man's bluff." All the players except the blind man station themselves in different parts of the room. The blind folded paper then feels his way round the room until he touches somebody. The player who is touched must immediately give an imitation of the noise made by some animal a donkey, cat, dog, cow, pig, etc., repeating it three times if requested. The blind man must guess the name of his prisoner by the voice. If he is successful the person named becomes blind now. If unsuccessful the blind man must release his prisoner and try again.

Bernaise Sauce.

To make bernaise sauce beat together two tablespoonsful tarragon vinegar, two tablespoonsful water and one slice onion. Make a second mixture of the slightly beaten yolks of three eggs one-half teaspoonful salt and one-quarter teaspoonful paprika. Strain the first mixture into this. Cook like custard, stirring constantly until it is thick and smooth. Add slowly one-half cupful butter creamed and stir until well blended. This is to be served with meats and is sufficient for six or eight people.

HINTS FOR THE BUSY HOUSEWIFE

New Spoon Holder That Keeps Contents In Place.

To the old fashioned spoon holder several objections have been raised, none of them serious, but they set a Pennsylvania man to thinking, and he designed a holder which overcomes them. One objection to the old type of receptacle was the ease with which it overturned and spilled its contents on the table. Another fault was the manner in which the spoons sometimes became entangled, so that when you removed one you brought others with it.

The holder shown herewith has a relatively long base and is quite stable. The interior is in the general shape of the bowl of a spoon, and the latter fits smoothly into it, with the handle projecting through a slot. As each spoon is put into the holder it rests exactly upon the one below it and a neat pile is formed.

Oyster Shortcake.

Make a rich shortcake of one pint of flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, sifted together four times, one-quarter of a cupful of butter, one egg, beaten and well mixed with scant cupful of milk. Spread one-half over a pie tin or biscuit tin, cover well with butter and then lay on the other half. Bake until well done in a quick oven. Remove, take apart and let cool for five minutes; then fill and cover top with the following: Roll one quart of oysters in their own liquor. As soon as a scum is set remove it and drain and return half the liquor into the saucepan. Mix one scant tablespoonful of flour with two heaping tablespoonfuls of butter and when light and creamy very slowly pour the boiling liquor over it, stirring constantly, and season with salt and pepper. Roll up once and add three tablespoonfuls of cream or rich milk and the oysters. Stir for just a minute and then remove. Mix shortcake and serve at once.

"Of course you are going to seek the man."

"I don't know about that," replied Senator Worthington. "A man who stands around waiting for an office to seek him probably wouldn't have energy enough to do anything with it if it came his way." Washington Star.

COATS THAT SHOULD INTEREST YOU

Owing to the fashionableness of the one piece dress, coats are in greater prominence than for several years past. The rounded corners or slight straight cut away—with spring-like trimmings and pretty new closings as well as new fabrics, puts the former season's coat out of style. Even the least expensive ones have the cut, the cloth and ideas you would hardly expect at the price. We were never so well stocked with coats for spring—Coats that are tailored to our order by the "Wooltex" organization and three or four other high grade manufacturers. A coat bought from us will not only hold its shape—but will have style and fit.

Coats at $7 to $20—Every between price and for all sizes of women.
